ANOTHRER CRUISE PLANNED BY NORFOLK GROUP

Richmond, Va.- Itinerary for the seventh All-Virginia Cruise from Norfolk to South America and the Caribbean was announced offiially by J. River Worsham, Norfolk industrialist who is president of the Virginia Cruise Corporation.

Sailing is scheduled for next January 25, at 11 P. M., aboard the S. S. Ryndam, and five ports of call will be made before returning to Norfolk at 1 P. M. on February 9.

"The Ryndam is an all air-conditioned cruise vessel of the Holland - America Line," Worsham said, "and is an identical sister ship of the S. S. Maasdam, which was sold out completely last winter for our sixth 14-day winter vacation cruise of Virginians to the Caribbean area."

He said the first port of call for the 1957 cruise will be St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands, January 29, and two days later a stop will be made at La Guaira, Venezuela, the seaport of Caracas.

On the return leg of the voyage to Norfolk, Worsham said these three stops would be made: February 2—Bridgetown, Barbados; February 3—Charlestown, Island of Nevis; and Fegruary 6— Hamilton, Bermuda.

Worsham pointed out that the first of the All-Virginia cruises was held in 1951, and was the product of thinking by Norfolk civic leaders in the Norfolk Twenty - First Street Business Association.

"From the first, the idea was to focus attention on the unusual geographical advantages of Hampton Roads and other Virginia ports," Worsham said. "This interest led naturally to the formation of the Virginia Cruise Corporation by the Norfolk Port Authority, Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, and the Twenty-First Street Business Association.

"Each year since 1951, with the exception of 1954 when no cruise was held, successful cruise operations have been conducted to South America and the Caribbean. We have found the cruises to be an answer to a popular demand by Virginians for winter vacations in tropical waters, and we have found our Latin American neighbors interested in our business," Worsham said.

Food sales reach a new high in first half of year.

A record use of cotton is predicted for this season.

Japanese exports of portable radio receivers soar.

Appomattox is a growing town.

About The Home

You should always set a good example for your children, but don't try to be perfect. Teaching children to understand others is just as important as your being understanding toward them. No child can imitate the picture of the perfect adult who never makes a mistake.

It is important for children to know that every human does something wrong at one time or another. This will tend to keep him from becoming a perfectionist, a sad state for anyone. Explain that you still love people, even though they make mistakes. Each child must learn that persons closest as well as those distant to him have imperfections.

During an ordinary day, mothers have many chances to offer sympathetic understanding to children. This, done in the proper way, will help to develop understanding of others in their children.

Never try to cover up your obvious errors with weak excuses. Often the youngest of children can sense when an explanation isn't the entire truth. Instead of making excuses or remaining silent, admit your forgetfulness and carelessness to them. Tell the children how angry you are with yourself and that you intend to be much more careful next time.

From this the children get the picture that though you sometimes make mistakes, you strive to correct them and not make them again. They'll also gain insight into understanding the problems and the frailties of others.

Never have an argument with your husband in front of your children. This will make them feel insecure and greatly damage their personality if allowed to happen often. Don't lose control of your temper before your children. In time this will cause your children to lose a certain amount of respect for you and will also teach them to have little control of their own tempers.

TOPPING AND SUCKERING BURLEY TOBACCO IS PROFITABLE

Research conducted shows that topping and suckering tobacco tends to increase the yield of inferior grades and to increase the yield of the more valuable middle grades.

There has been a tendency among burley growers in recent years to cut topping and suckering operations to a minimum. Although this practice saves labor, it also reduces the value of the crop.

As most tobacco farmers know, tobacco grown without topping and suckering tends to lose its bottom leaves, fails to mature properly, is low in weight, and often cures with an inferior finish.

On the other hand, topping and suckering encourages the enlargement of the leaves, attainment of a high stage of ripeness, and curing to a satisfactory finished product. These favorable results are not often possible when tops and suckers are allowed to grow.

It is true that the lower tobacco is topped and the closer it is kept suckered, the higher its nicotene content will be. However, manufacturers would rather have well-developed ripe tobacco, rich in aroma and flavor with its accompanying increase in nicotene content, than immature, low - nicotene tobacco.

There are other means by which the nicotene content of tobacco can be kept at a satisfactory level. These include such practices as the proper use of nitrogen fertilizers, close spacing of plants, and the assurance of adequate soil moisture while the crop is growing.

In Two Ways

Lesson for August 5, 1956

THE United States now has more drug addicts than all other western nations combined—sixty thousand. In the past three years the Federal Bureau of Narcotics has compiled a list of names and addresses of 30,000 known addicts, and the list is growing at the rate of a thousand every month. These and other facts were brought to light last January by a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee after seven months seeking the facts. Illegal dope traffic, they found out, has trebled since World War II. Whereas at the war's end there was one addict to every 10,000 persons, now there is one to every 3,000. Approximately 50% of all crime in our cities, and 25% of all crime in the nation at large, is traceable to drug addiction.

Dr. Foreman

How Does It Start?

The narcotics evil, like the alcohol evil, like most social sores, begins with the young people. If for one generation you could bring up children and young people with no knowledge of such things and no temptation to indulge, you would have dealt a heavy blow to those who traffic in these things. Nobody, no healthy boy or girl certainly, wants to be the sort of wretch Frank Sinatra played in "The Man with the Golden Arm," or the kind of persons you may find in the hospitals that try to do something with narcotics victims. But young people the traffic must have. Thirteen per cent of all dope addicts in the country are under 21. (These figures from TIME magazine for last Jan. 16.) Now, how does a boy or girl get started on the dope habit? How do they get started drinking? The other night a boy in his second stolen car for that night traveled in two store fronts and woke up in the hospital. His girl friend woke up next morning in jail. Both were about sixteen, both had been drinking—beer, she said. The question is, Why do they do it? What starts them off?

Letting Yourself Go

One answer given by young people themselves is that they are after thrills, "a kick." Just being young is not thrill enough, they have to jazz it up with alcohol or narcotics. Let yourself go! they say to themselves. Go on, faster, faster; when all the thrill nature provides are stale, then go after the artificial jolts you can get from a bottle or a hypodermic syringe. This is not all the fault of young people. Older people often lead them astray. Even teachers may do it, for there is a philosophy of education that says, in effect, that a child must never be made to do what he doesn't want to do. "What I want" is supposed to be the key to happiness. Now this is precisely the opposite of the Christian way of living. Self-control, not letting yourself go, is always a mark of the Christian life in every New Testament description of it. Life without inner control is not only a weak life, it is headed for a crash.

Who's to Blame?

Sometimes the blame for young people's downfall is not to be laid at the door of the traffickers in drugs. Parents themselves who have never said "No" may be to blame. Some years ago a school for girls received this letter from a wealthy woman: "My daughter has always been spoiled and given as much money as she could spend. She is sixteen years old and I'm afraid has the wrong view of life . . . I don't think her companions are just the right sort either . . . I shall try very hard to have her wardrobe proper although it will be extremely difficult because she has always had very expensive and extremely fancy clothes. . . . Please advise as to what subjects she had better take up. If either Latin or domestic science can be taken I prefer D.S. because she knows very little about cooking. I am very glad the girls are requested to keep their rooms in order . . . It is my wish that my daughter becomes what a real American girl should be, a perfect wife and mother, and under your care I hope she will come home to us a different girl." Do you think she did? Do you think she could have? If you had been in charge of that school, would you have accepted this girl? If she finally turned out to be an alcoholic or a narcotic drug addict, whose fault would it have been? The Christian Way is the harder road—till you get to the end!

Plan Ahead for Parties and Holidays

With a little forethought and wise use of your food freezer, you can plan ahead for holidays and give a party at a moment's notice. Here are a few ideas:

Bake special cakes and decorate them appropriately for birthdays, anniversaries or holidays. They'll be as beautiful and taste as good as the day you made them. Frosted cupcakes from the freezer are handy to serve when friends drop in for tea.

Also have in the freezer a few extra cans of frozen juice concentrates, for cool drinks. They might be just right for that afternoon snack, especially for the younger set home from school.

Ice cream specialties are freezer favorites. Try a ribbon cake with ice cream, and ice cream pie or ice cream clowns for the children.

All kinds of cookies, sweet rolls, coffee cakes and breads freeze well. Keep a supply in the freezer because they always come in handy.

Fancy tea sandwiches and appetizers are fussy and time-consuming. Make them in spare time and they'll be ready for impromptu affairs.

Be prepared to serve a festive company dinner at any time. Almost the entire meal can come from the freezer. For a perfect dessert to climax the meal, fresh-baked pies (frozen before baking) or fresh berry shortcake (berries, shortcake and whipped cream frozen separately) are ideal.

For an informal get-together, make a large batch of a pet specialty (spaghetti sauce, chow mein, chili, etc.). Chill, package in several containers and freeze.

If planning a turkey or roast chicken dinner, prepare the bird for the oven, wrap and freeze it, and roast later. For best results, package without stuffing, wrap giblets separately, and defrost bird before roasting.

Other ideas: Freeze left over cooked turkey slices, turkey sandwiches, individual turkey pies or turnovers.

Save time by making cranberry sauce early and storing it in the freezer. Freeze some berries for later use, too. Freshly-made cranberry sauce is as good with baked ham at Easter or fried spring chicken, as with the Thanksgiving turkey. The quick and easy way to freeze whole cranberries is dry-pack without sugar.

It's a relief to have the Thanksgiving pies all made ahead of time and ready for the oven, be they pumpkin, apple, berry or mince!

To help with holiday entertaining, store these in your freezer: Bags of extra ice cubes, holiday cookies, ice cream and sauce, fruit bars, filled cream puffs, nuts and candy.
